An arrangement whereby a woman agrees to bear your child for nine months and gives you the baby after the delivery is called surrogacy. It is of two types:

- Traditional: The eggs of the surrogate get fertilized with the sperms of the donor, and the surrogate is the biological mother.
- Gestational: In this, both the eggs and the sperms are of the donor, and the woman is not the biological mother.

Why use a surrogate mother?

- Complications with the uterus
- You have got the uterus removed
- You have ailments like heart disease which makes pregnancy impossible for you
- You have faced multiple miscarriages and failed IVF
- Same-sex partners can have babies
- If age is the hindrance, couples can seek help from surrogate mothers

Surrogacy and IVF

Through In Vitro Fertilization (IVF), eggs are collected from the mother and are fertilized with the sperm of the father, and the embryo is thus placed in the uterus of the surrogate mother who carries the baby for nine months and post that gives your baby to you. It is a legal arrangement, and the surrogate mother doesn't have any right on the baby.

What is the cost of surrogacy?

The surrogacy cost involves the following expenses

- Cost of screening
- IVF cost
- Cost of medication
- Collection of egg and transfer of the embryo
- Cost of medication during the pregnancy of the surrogate
- Delivery and post-delivery expenses
- Insurance of the surrogate

These expenses don't include the hospitalization expenses if complications happen during pregnancy and post-natal care of
